Course Description:

In order for 10th graders to build a foundation for college and career readiness, students need to learn to use writing as a way of offering and supporting opinions, demonstrating understanding of the subjects they are studying and convey in real and imagined experiences and events since approximately b

The Plot of Students' Lives is used to focus on where they have been, what they do to become successful, and a vision of what success looks like to them. Using a checklist, students get experience writing their plots to practice their writing skills. They type their plots to get typing skills. They learn to proofread and edit their work before submitting it. Students learn to present and listen to presenters to give feedback.

Scholastic Action Magazine for Teens will be used to practice writing 5-paragraph essays on articles.

Flocabulary is used on Fridays to expose students to local and international news. It is also used for visual vocabulary.
